

Red Envelope Tradition

This is an ancient Chinese custom that is used on auspicious occasions and is associated with good luck. To offer Red Envelopes honors the tradition and legacy associated with Feng Shui. The color red is symbolic of power and protection. Our heart mind is now opening to more senses in the body and needs to integrate this new awareness. Nine or multiples of nine Red Envelopes are symbolic of completion and peak accomplishment—they act as talismans to magnetize positive energy. Place paper money or coins in each new envelope and visualize that good luck, good health and lots of protection will touch those involved. Money represents vitality; it anchors the consult in a tangible reality and gives the message to our senses that this is real. The Red Envelopes are given at the end of the consultation to the consultant along with the fee. The consultation ends with a closing that involves the Red Envelopes.
